

I think the use of power lines for the transmission of digital internet broadband is not needed. This use will cause a tremendous amount of interference to other radio uses.

The power companys can not keep their lines clean at he present time, so it would be compounded by the additional use of broadband. I think if the power companies can't make a good profit by selling electricity, then they should sell their companies to someone that could run their companies in a profitable manner.